

MURRAY FREED BY CITY MARSHALS

Officials Finally Force Entrance Into Brooklyn House Where Tenant Had Been Locked Up for Six Days.

Armed with a writ of replevin to give a show of law to their muscular efforts, City Marshal John W. Irwin and Deputy Charles A. Scott, of Brooklyn, went to the rescue of Schuyler R. Murray to-day.

Mr. Murray has been locked up in the house, No. 572 Pacific street, since last Wednesday, his landlord refusing to allow him to remove his furniture on account of non-payment of rent.

Murray occupies two rooms in Mr. Brown's flat, and since the strikes have shut down the buildings under course of construction he has been out of work. He is a carpenter by trade, and until recently made a living when he was able for himself, his wife and his son, but latterly things went hard for the Murays and they were ordered to move. They wanted to take their furniture with them, but the landlord said "No." Then Murray was locked up in his room, access being denied him.

Marshals Force Entrance.
Mrs. Murray's attorney sued out a writ of replevin and to-day the Browns gave up their living cleaner, but only after an entrance had been made by the marshals over the roofs and through the windows of the Pacific street house. At 12 o'clock Marshals Irwin and Scott reconnoitered about the entrance of the Browns' home. They could not make an entrance under the law through the outside door, as this was the property of the Browns, so they went down the stairs to the rear, and with a short ladder clambered over the roof. From one roof to another they made their way to Brown's home. From the roof to the ledge outside of Murray's rooms they dropped the ladder and then entered by means of the window.

Prisoner Delighted.
Murray was overjoyed at the arrival of his visitors. His several days of bananas and water had thinned him to a shadow of his former self, and constant fear that he was to lose all his furniture had left its impress upon him. He said, however, he was determined to hold the fort, even if no help had arrived, for some time longer.

Opening Murray's door into the hall the officers were confronted by Miss Brown and a man named Phillips, relative of the Browns. Miss Hall held her arms outstretched as if to block the progress of the men to the door, and then pulled her arms down and then they passed her.

"I was advised to do that by my attorney," said Miss Brown. "Now you will be charged with assault." The marshals pulled the man from the girl further than to pass by her without replying.

The furniture was moved from the two rooms which the Murays had formerly occupied and placed in a big van. It was then taken to a storage warehouse in front of the house, a passerby wanted to know if he needed some ice-water.

"No, thank you," was the reply. "It's chilly enough here." Another kind friend furnished him with a newspaper and he dropped a fishing line out of the window and reeled a letter, which was brought there by a postman carrying the special delivery.

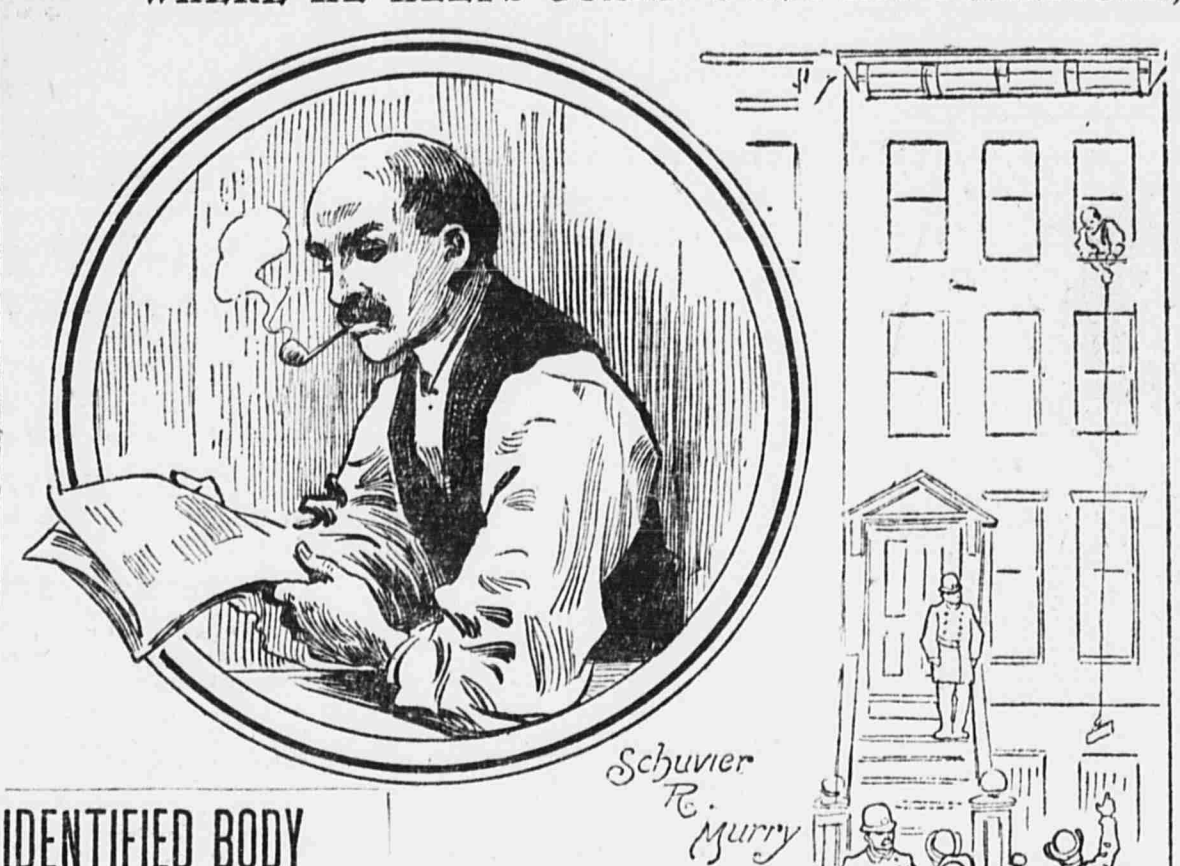

Now that Murray is free he says he will do all in his power to punish his captors.

THE DETERMINED TENANT AND THE HOUSE WHERE HE KEEPS GUARD OVER HIS FURNITURE,

IDENTIFIED BODY UNDER SAILCLOTH

It Is that of Bedora Repari, Twelve Years Old, Who Left Home Sunday—Coroner Still Says Lad Was Murdered.

The body of the boy found yesterday on the job line pier was identified to-day as that of Bedora Repari, twelve years old, of No. 13 Morris street, Dominican Republic.

Bedora left his home on Sunday morning to play along the water front. He was not seen by any one who knew him after he left the house. Coroner Schuler and Coroner's Physician Higgins, who performed the autopsy, are of the opinion that the lad was murdered after his treatment. They say that there is evidence to connect a woman with the crime.

This belief is not shared by Capt. Hodgins, of the Madison street station, whose precinct detectives, McDonald and McGee, have been at work on the case. The body was found under a tarpaulin, and lying across it were two heavy timbers, 20 feet long and 4 inches wide.

Capt. Hodgins thinks that the boy was playing on the pier Sunday morning with companions and crawled under the tarpaulin to hide. The other boys either threw the timbers upon him maliciously or accidentally upset a pile of them. The head of the little fellow was crushed.

If a murder was committed, Capt. Hodgins argues, the murderers would have thrown the body into the river. It was found only a few feet from the edge of the pier.

Coroner Schuler's theory that Repari may have been lured to the water front by a gang of ruffians found evidence with Maria Verde, of No. 31 Second street, whose seven-year-old son Antonio was missing from his home since Friday.

For this conduct Mrs. Ball and the district auxiliary, composed of four local Washington auxiliaries, were suspended by Mrs. Lewis, as was also the Mary Sherman Miles local auxiliary, part of which liberally supported Mrs. Ball's action.

KILPATRICK LOVED BARONESS IN VAIN

Young Man of Wealth Who Killed Himself in the Martinique Had Followed the Baroness de Pallandt.

A new explanation for the suicide of John D. Kilpatrick, who killed himself in the Martinique on Monday last week, is found in his reported infatuation for the Baroness de Pallandt, who did not return his love. Many of the young man's friends say that her refusal of his offer of marriage and the report that the man with whom she travelled around the world was not a relative, as he supposed, caused him to shoot himself.

The Baroness is the divorced wife of the Baron de Pallandt and is the daughter of a wealthy Chicagoan. Young Kilpatrick met her in Tokio last spring and followed her around the world, showering costly gifts upon her. She travelled with a Frenchman, whom she introduced to Kilpatrick as a relative. Kilpatrick often spoke to his friends of his infatuation for the Baroness and extolled her beauty of face and charm of manner. She spent most of her time in travelling, and the young man followed her about, always anxious to do her bidding.

Two weeks before Kilpatrick shot himself, he accompanied her to Europe. It was then that Kilpatrick heard that she was not a relative, although he received confirmation of the story. The Baroness, it will be remembered, attracted much attention several years ago by her association with Mrs. Dan Hanna, who was then at the Bayview, and escaped to Europe with her children, although officers of the court were in the hotel with writs of habeas corpus.

TO EXPEL HOLY GHOSTS.

Gov. Hill Is Asked to Drive San Francisco's Followers from Maine.

LISBON FALLS, Me., Sept. 29.—An attempt is to be made to drive the Holy Ghost and His Society, with headquarters at Shiloh, a few miles from this town, out of the State of Maine. Prominent citizens have already appealed to Gov. Hill, who, it is reported, has paid a personal visit to the Bible University at Shiloh and investigated the condition of things reported to exist there.

It is a well known fact that members of the different colonies of Holy Ghosts are throughout the State have of late been in some instances without the law, and in some instances without the law, and in some instances without the law.

WOMEN WAR OVER MRS. NELSON MILES

Big Fight Threatened To-Day at the Meeting of Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary at New Haven, Conn.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 29.—A war which dates back to the initiation of Mrs. Miles, the wife of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, as a member of the Mary Sherman Miles Auxiliary of the Spanish War Veterans was revived here when the administration council of the women's convention opened at the New Haven House. A detail of veterans was appointed to see that the peace was kept. Mrs. Flora A. Lewis, President-General of the Women's Auxiliaries, declared that if necessary she would call upon the New Haven police to keep order. The convention proper, when the fight is expected, opened this morning.

Mrs. Lewis stated that the whole affair was the result of not inviting Mrs. Isaac Worrell Ball, a Washington newspaper woman, and who was acting president of the district auxiliary of Washington, to the reception at which Mrs. Miles was initiated as a member of the chapter bearing her name. Mrs. Lewis declares that in consequence Mrs. Ball caused her to be ridiculed in a Washington newspaper and pronounced the election of Mrs. Miles illegal, but declared that she, as acting president, would "legalize an illegal action" by accepting the election of Mrs. Miles, inasmuch as she was the wife of the General of the army.

For this conduct Mrs. Ball and the district auxiliary, composed of four local Washington auxiliaries, were suspended by Mrs. Lewis, as was also the Mary Sherman Miles local auxiliary, part of which liberally supported Mrs. Ball's action.

Mrs. Ball arrived with her supporters bright and early in the morning and announced her intention of signing a reinstatement of the Washington district auxiliary, and her friends had the pleasure of seeing the reinstatement of Mrs. Miles, inasmuch as she was the wife of the General of the army.

Mrs. Ball openly declares that the occasion to her was partly incited by Adj. Gen. Dyer, of the Spanish War Veterans, because his wife was not elected president of the Miles auxiliary, and that she and Mrs. Lewis had joined forces to oust her.

Another cause was the announcement of Miss Cornelia Clay, daughter of Gen. Cecil Clay, of the Department of Justice, acting as general of the auxiliary that she would prefer charges against Mrs. Lewis.

Mrs. Lewis has been suspended on charges, but retains the books and accounts of the auxiliary, and also has retained legal advice. It is alleged by Mrs. Lewis that Miss Clay has failed to comply with orders of the National Council, and has been guilty of breach of discipline. Miss Clay responds with charges of unbecoming conduct and illegal and unbecoming action on the part of Mrs. Lewis. Mrs. Clay has joined forces with Mrs. Ball.

The Spanish War Veterans arrived yesterday, 800 strong. At their session an invitation was received to hold the next convention in St. Louis.

Adj. Gen. Dyer, in his report, says that membership of the order is now 10,000.

A severe electric storm last night did great damage at Ponce and so disarranged the lighting system that the city was dark throughout the night.

ACTRESS TO TELL WHO HIRED VERDU

Says Broker She Is Suing Employed Him, but Her Friends Had Nothing to Do with His Murder.

Miss Eulalia Lee Denson, the actress, who was shadowed by Private Detective Frederick A. Verdu, who was murdered in West Fifty-fifth street, promises to reveal the name of the wealthy broker whom she is suing for breach of promise. It was this man, she declares, who employed Verdu and Hansen to follow her.

Miss Denson, whose stage name is Eulalia Lee, appeared last year in "The Mocking Bird" as Mabelle Gilman's understudy, tells a story of love and romance that came into her life after she came from her home in Norfolk, Va., to go on the stage in New York. Among the first persons she met was a wealthy young man on Wall street.

"He asked me to marry him and I consented," said Miss Denson last night. "He told me he was about to be made a partner in the firm with which he was connected and our wedding could not take place until that was done."

His Letters Stopped.
"When I returned to New York from a road trip with 'The Mocking Bird' I was ill and went home to Norfolk for a few weeks' rest. His letters stopped, and I came to New York Aug. 21 last, fearing he was ill."

"At his office I learned that he had sailed on a friend's yacht to Newfoundland on a shooting trip. Two days later I got a letter from him which had gone to Norfolk and had been forwarded. It told me that it was necessary that we part, and gave me much advice."

Miss Denson tells of several exciting interviews after that, both with the young man and his partner. "The last time I saw him," she said, "was just before last Friday, the day Verdu was killed. At noon that day the man was to meet my lawyer, but their conference was postponed. In the early evening I went to the store on the corner to telephone my lawyer and find out the result of the conference."

Says She Saw Verdu.
"The man I now know was Verdu came in, made some trivial purchase and kept near me while I telephoned. I was at dinner when I heard that he had been killed. I am satisfied that no friends of mine had part in it, because I saw only two men in the neighborhood, and neither is the sort of man to become involved in such an affair."

She said that she saw Verdu at No. 42 West Fifty-seventh street, went to West Forty-seventh street and saw he was attacked on the street by detectives. He identified young Moran as one of the gang which killed Verdu. Moran was released under $5,000 bail.

BOUND A GIRL AND TURNED ON GAS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—As Abbey Howell, a domestic, was engaged in sweeping the front doorsteps of No. 124 Waller street, yesterday, a man rushed from behind, grasped her by the arms, dragged her forcibly into her sleeping room, pinned her arms behind her back, laid her on the bed in the room, turned on the gas, locked the door and fled. She was a prisoner in the death chamber, she was so frightened that she hardly had strength enough left to scream for help.

But she did scream and was rescued. The girl, who is nineteen years old, was so overcome by the fumes and shock that not until last night could she talk coherently. She told the police that her assailant was her husband, whose brutality drove her from her home several months ago, and whose name she had abandoned.

ANOTHER POISON SUSPECT.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 29.—A second person is now suspected in the Davis poisoning candy case and one or more persons are expected in a day or so.

LEFT DYING MAN ON THE SIDEWALK

Policeman Refused to Aid Victim of Highwaymen and Ordered Him to Move On, Thinking He Was Drunk.

Joseph Shanahan is dying in the J. Hood Wright Hospital from a fractured skull. His brother William declares he was beaten and robbed by two highwaymen and denied assistance by a policeman, who evidently thought he was drunk.

The young man lives at No. 522 Columbus avenue and after being paid off on Saturday at the building in course of erection at Broadway and Forty-third street he went to the home of his sister, at No. 431 West Thirty-first street. He remained there until late in the evening, when he met some friends and went to Dugan's saloon, in West Twenty-seventh street, between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues.

It was midnight when he left the saloon alone and started to get the car to go home. He turned into Thirtieth street when he saw two men following him in Fifth avenue, and seeing that they turned, too, he started to run, according to the story told to the police by his brother.

The two men ran, too, and overtook him near Ninth avenue. He was struck over the head and as he lay almost unconscious on the sidewalk he was robbed of his week's wages. It was an hour later when a policeman came and ordered him to move on.

According to his brother, Shanahan told the policeman his condition and asked to be taken to a hospital, but the policeman answered, with an oath, that he would get nothing. He remained on the sidewalk until almost daylight when with the aid of persons who saw him there, he went to his sister's home. There he told the story of his adventures to his brother.

Dr. Maher, of No. 221 West Twenty-third street, was called, but did not discover that the man was seriously hurt. He was taken to his home in a home worse and when his brother came from work last night he found him unconscious.

The police were notified and the man was removed to the hospital, where it was found that his skull was fractured. His condition is becoming worse hourly and the doctors there say he has but a short time to live.

The police are now making an effort to find out who attacked him and the brother will also insist that there be an investigation of the conduct of the policeman who is said to have left him on the sidewalk.

KEPT MAN AFLOAT TWENTY MINUTES

Deckhand Who Sprang Into River to Rescue Stranger Has Hard Time Supporting Him in Water.

Edwin McCleary, an insurance agent whose home is at No. 241 East Eighth street, is in Bellevue Hospital to-day after a frightful experience in the East River off East Thirty-first street. He was saved from drowning by John McNeas, a deckhand on the barge Edward Butler.

McCleary had an appointment with the captain of one of a fleet of tugs at the foot of Thirty-first street and went there to talk insurance after dinner last night. He was stepping from one tug to another when he missed his footing and fell into the water.

His cries were heard by McNeas, who was the only one near. The deckhand jumped into the water and held the drowning man up with difficulty. It was twenty minutes before his cries attracted attention. A rope was then thrown to them and they were pulled to the deck of a barge.

McCleary fell unconscious and was taken to the hospital, where he remained very weak. McNeas lighted his pipe and refused to believe that he was a hero.

FELL FROM WAGON, DIED IN STREET

Driver Known as "Louie" Was Missed When His Team Came on Alone, and Was Found Dead by Companions.

A driver for Nicholas Schnepf, a dealer in provisions at No. 501 First avenue, fell from his wagon to-day and was found dead in the street. Although he had worked for Schnepf for four years he was known by no other name than "Louie," and not a man in the house knew where he lived.

"Louie," a big, broad-shouldered German, drove the last of three wagons that started from the Hudson Street Hospital he said he was dead. The body was taken to the station house. The doctor said he was not sure whether the man had died from heart disease or whether he had gone to sleep and fallen from his seat, being killed by the fall.

At Schnepf's place no one had ever heard the man's last name, nor did they know where he lived. He had always been sober and industrious, and during the four years he worked there he had seldom missed a day. An effort is being made to find his family, for he had several times spoken of his wife and children.
